Introduction
The World Small Animal Veterinary Association (WSAVA) is an association of associations. Its membership is made up of veterinary organisations from all over the world, which are concerned with small companion animals such as cats, dogs, rabbits, guinea pigs etc. Currently there are 114 member and affiliate associations, representing over 200,000 individual veterinarians from around the globe.

WSAVA’s primary purpose is to advance the quality and availability of small animal medicine and surgery, and this broad aim is achieved in a number of different ways.

- WSAVA fosters the exchange of scientific information, both between individual veterinarians and between their veterinary organisations.
- WSAVA furthers international relationships between all veterinarians dealing with small animal health and welfare.
- WSAVA promotes the standing of small animal practice.

Application for Associate Membership

The process of membership in WSAVA is defined in Section 3 of the WSAVA By-Laws and, in summary, is restricted to formal veterinary organizations dedicated to small animal veterinary medicine with insufficient financial resources to permit full membership; however, full membership (including associated costs) would be anticipated to occur within 3 years of joining as an associate member. To apply, simply provide the information requested below and ensure it is submitted to the WSAVA Secretariat (admin@wsava.org) 67 days prior to the next Assembly meeting (this equates to no later than July 21st, 2023).

Based on restricted finances, it is not expected that a member of your association would attend the Assembly meeting to present your application to the Assembly members but this would be preferred; however, a proxy presenter would also be accepted. This body will subsequently vote on the merits of your application and determine its success. The next Assembly meeting is on 26 September in Lisbon, Portugal.

| Rationalization or explanation why dual national small animal representation would be complementary and/or synergistic | Partnering with associations that specialize in rescue and neutralizing street animals brings unique expertise to the table. While EVA focuses on advancing veterinary care, our partners excel in animal rescue, rehabilitation, and population control. This complementary skill set creates a well-rounded approach to addressing the diverse challenges faced by street animals and enhancing their welfare. Dual national representation fosters seamless coordination between organizations with shared goals. By working together, we can create a cohesive strategy to tackle street animal issues more effectively. This coordination avoids duplication of efforts and optimizes resource allocation, ultimately leading to more successful sauvetage and animal neutralization initiatives. The synergy created through dual national representation enables us to reach a wider audience with our messages on animal welfare. Combined efforts in awareness campaigns, educational initiatives, and public outreach increase the visibility of our cause, garnering greater public support and participation in sauvetage and animal control efforts. |

RECOMMENDATIONS

The Algerian International Veterinary Space Congress
And the first animal world Show in Algeria

With the attendance of nearly 1700 participants, the EVA 1st World Veterinary Congress, in Tipasa, from September 19 to 23, 2022, bringing together the world’s most famous experts in the fields of animal production, animal health and welfare, as well as practicing veterinarians working in rural and urban areas, representatives of official veterinary services, professors and researchers in Veterinary medicine, and university students of veterinary institutes, came to participate in high-level scientific lectures and workshops Applied in various disciplines of veterinary medicine, exhibition of veterinary products and equipment, and even lovers of the animal world were present with us in the exhibition dedicated to animals and animal products.

These scientific days were under the slogan: « Challenges of veterinary medicine between public health and the environment »; where did the intense discussions focus it lasted three days in particular about the new challenges of veterinary medicine.

Proceeding from the objectives of controlling and eliminating animal diseases (including infectious and transmissible from animals to humans), the work of Veterinarian's effective influence extends beyond borders and generations, giving the profession a dimension of the global common good.

After discussion and dialogue between various experts and specialists in the field, the participants in the conference came up with the following recommendations:

- Rational use of antibiotics and adherence to withdrawal periods.
- Generalization on a small and large scale regarding the impact of medicines used in veterinary medicine on public health and the environment.
- Establishment of a laboratory to detect the true concentration of veterinary drugs.
Reaffirming the veterinarian's role in food safety monitoring.

Continuous training for veterinarians (public sector and practitioners) is more than necessary, it should be mandatory! Similar to what is the case in other countries. The Algerian Veterinary Space “EVA” was able to establish an educational program and to renew Information for a few years in the form of a practical training that saw the birth of the EVA Academy, and the results are promising.

The necessity of openness to foreign countries in order to create spaces for exchanging experiences between veterinarians and endless possibilities to improve the quality of veterinary services.

Creation of an international network of Algerian veterinarians residing abroad (Réseau International des Vétérinaires Algériens «RIVA»), which was launched during the activities of this congress, as it aims to create a bridge of scientific and knowledge communication between the skills of Algerian veterinarians from abroad and their colleague practicing in the country.

"RIVA" will focus mainly on continuous training, updating scientific research and information, through an agenda of lectures using the technology of remote lectures, and practical training workshops in attendance to suit the needs of the veterinary teaching programs in Algeria.

The need to work in close cooperation with technical institutes (ITELV, INMV), milk offices (ONIL), expertise companies (insurance) and all structures related to animal health and welfare to be focused on the problem and able to contribute to solve it.

The importance of strong interrelationship and cooperation between human and veterinary medicine and the involvement of more veterinarians in monitoring zoonoses.

The need to move towards specializations in veterinary practice and to provide the necessary tools for this orientation (internships, training, post-graduation training...).

Cooperating with national and international associations working to achieve similar goals.

Encouraging innovations and inventions in the field of animal health and welfare by adopting this first competition as a cornerstone for future cycles to enhance this competition, in cooperation with the Ministry of Startups.

Strict control of the distribution of veterinary drugs.
Partnership with veterinary schools and institutes should take on a greater dimension because the university remains a safe bet for supervising and supporting newly graduated veterinarians, as the presence of a large number of university professors from various veterinary institutes who participated in the conference activities to communicate on various topics, is proof of that.

- Studying the impact of veterinary drugs on the environment by analyzing them in the droppings of poultry and other animals, which are used as organic fertilizers.
- Dealing directly with the countries producing the raw materials in the formulation of the drug to ensure the appropriate price and quality.
- Encouraging the local production of medicines and nutritional supplements.
- Regulating the veterinary profession by expediting the establishment of the Deanship of Veterinarians Council.
- Contribute to employment for veterinarians to absorb the largest number of them.
- Changing the pattern of education in veterinary medicine to allow keeping actual pace, with a focus on veterinary pharmacy and the pharmaceutical industry.
- Integrating livestock and fisheries in the same ministry, delegated ministry or independent directorate of veterinary services.
- It was agreed between the participating countries, especially the Arabian ones, and through a meeting of some leaders of the General Union of Arab Veterinarians, and some countries of the Maghreb veterinary space that the State of Libya would have the honor of hosting the celebration of the World Veterinary Day for the coming year 2023, Libya occupies a prominent position among the Arab countries peoples and has a high and multiple scientific competencies in various fields of veterinary medical sciences, which makes it a scientific beacon with distinction: "Coordinator of the Maghreb Veterinary Space Conference" in its third edition, providing an opportunity to hold a meeting of Arab leaders of the General Union of Arab Veterinarians in Libya.
